ABOUT

Individuals use social media to communicate even if they are sitting in the same environment. Here is a double-edged sword: even if these sites and digital tools offer new portals for entertainment, communication, education, social interaction, on the other hand, it should be considered that their unlimited involvement with the media digital causes serious problems. In this sense, it can be considered that people, especially young people, live a virtual life. According to the results, the excessive use of social media causes depression, social anxiety, lower life satisfaction, poor academic performance, psychophysical problems, addiction, cyberbullying.

The target group of this project is the youth population who are not aware of the disadvantages and nature of social media which are not entirely suitable for them.
